

Jeremy E. Miller, LMT (WV), BCTMB, BS

Jeremy received his initial massage therapy training from the Baltimore School of Massage and his Bachelor of Science degree (Biology) from Shepherd College (now Shepherd University), completing both in 1997. An enthusiastic and passionate instructor, he has taught classes in human anatomy & physiology, professional ethics, and massage technique classes for some of the most respected massage schools in the nation, and currently teaches the Legal Aspects of Therapeutic Massage class at Northwestern Health Sciences University. Additionally, he is currently back in school himself in the Master of Science in Human Anatomy & Physiology Instruction program at the New York Chiropractic College. Jeremy has actively volunteered for the massage therapy profession including acting as a school accreditation site reviewer with the Commission on Massage Therapy Accreditation, an Ethics and Standards committee member for the National Certification Board for Therapeutic Massage & Bodywork and from 2007-2014 lead the ongoing effort to bring state credentialing to MN for Massage Therapists. Board Certified for Therapeutic Massage & Bodywork and a West Virginia state Licensed Massage Therapist, Jeremy joined the Penny George Institute for Health & Healing in Minneapolis in 2005, and works full time as a member of the Inpatient team at Abbott Northwestern Hospital providing care throughout the facility with a focus on the acute rehabilitation and oncology units. Jeremy lives outside of Minneapolis with his wife and two sons.
